Considering a part-job?

Part time work comes in all shapes and sizes. It might be a temporary role, a role where you only work a few evenings or weekends, or it might be seasonal work. The general rule is that:-

A young person under school leaving age (16) can get a part-time job from the age of 14. However, they can only be employed in what is considered 'light work'. Also, during term time and holiday periods the hours you are allowed to work varies. Find out more here

If you're in sixth form, you can work as many hours as you like. However, it's crucial to sit down and work out how much time you can commit to a job in the first place. Can your timetable really accommodate a part-time job? Weigh-up what is most important – your studies and grades or the instant financial rewards of a job?

Benefits of a part-time job

Develop valuable transferable skills.

It is an opportunity for you to find out what it's like being at work and for you to understand the skills that are needed in the workplace

A low-paying part-time job might be worth the investment if: You'll gain skills or experience that will make you more employable.

It helps you gain value for your money, and to even earn extra to treat yourself.

Tips for Finding a Part-Time Job

- Think about your timetable. Before even beginning your job search, think about what kind of work schedule do you want?
- Express availability. When you apply for a job, be sure to express your flexibility in your job applications/CV and during your interview.
- Show commitment. Many part-time jobs see a lot of turnover.
